DESIGN PHILOSOPHY

Hate is love without facts

-Richard Bach

Over its brief existence on earth, the human being has come to depend on its own species for personal, mental, and physical needs:

- the personal for love
- the mental for innovation
- the physical for health

As technology develops, however, we are able to create substitutes for the human being. I seek design that avoids substitution and becomes the language by which these needs are satisfied. In a world where formulaic responses are more economically efficient, design has lost its art form...

The art form returns when we look to satisfy our needs as simply as possible. Living without excess and greed is possible through design.
